Last year, we traveled to Thailand for our holiday. We left on the 8th of August and arrived in a small village close to the beach. The village was peaceful, with beautiful views of the ocean and friendly people. Every day, we explored the area, swam in the clear blue water, and enjoyed the delicious Thai food.

One afternoon, we decided to take a walk along the shore. The weather seemed perfect at first, with a gentle breeze and warm sunshine. As we walked, we suddenly heard a loud noise. We looked around and noticed the sky had turned completely dark. Huge waves began to form on the sea, and the wind grew stronger. At that moment, we thought it was an earthquake.

We immediately turned around and hurried back to our house. Before we could reach it, heavy rain started to pour down. The storm became intense, with thunder and lightning filling the sky. By the time we got inside, we were completely wet. Later, we learned it wasn't an earthquake but a sudden and severe storm. Despite the unexpected weather, we laughed about the experience. It turned into a memorable part of our trip!

Listening Script ex.2

"In China, a school day is very busy and starts early. Students usually begin school at 7:30 in the morning and finish at 4:30 in the afternoon. Most students wear school uniforms, which are often sporty and comfortable. The uniforms are usually in colors like blue, white, or red.

The school day starts with a morning exercise session. All the students go outside to do exercises together. After that, they have lessons like math, Chinese, and English. Students in China work very hard, and they often have a lot of homework. They also learn about Chinese history and culture.

At lunchtime, students eat in the school canteen. The food is usually Chinese, like rice, noodles, and vegetables. After lunch, students have a short break to rest or play. In the afternoon, they have more lessons or activities like music, art, or sports.

After school, many students go to extra classes or do homework. Some students also learn to play the piano or practice calligraphy. School in China is very important, and students work hard to do their best!"
